Slavoj Žižek: the world's hippest philosopher Slavoj Žižek has got an opinion on every subject from decaffeinated coffee to sex, from seagulls and swearing to the end of the world. He talks to Helen Brown.

Žižek dismisses those who dub him "The Elvis of Philosophy" with a brisk: "To the gulag! All of them!". "It is too traumatic for me to see myself. Whenever I see such a thing, my reaction is to ask: 'Would a woman allow me to take her daughter to the cinema?' My God! Of course not! I don't want to deal with myself. I don't want to exist. I just want to think."

But whether he wanted to or not, Slavoj Žižek came into independent existence in March 1949, in the then-Yugoslav republic of Slovenia. His father was an economist and civil servant and his mother was an accountant.

"My life is straightforward," he says. "Nothing happened. At 15, I wanted to be a movie director. But I saw some really good European films and I accepted that I couldn't do that. Then, at 17, I decided to become a philosopher."

Potatoes Can Reduce Blood Pressure

Just a couple of servings of potato a day can reduce blood pressure in obese or overweight people with high blood pressure, calling into question the lowly spud's current reputation as a fattening, unhealthy food, according to new research presented at a conference in Denver, Colorado, USA, on Wednesday.

"The potato, more than perhaps any other vegetable, has an undeserved, bad reputation that has led many healthconscious people to ban them from their diet," said Dr Joe Vinson, a professor in the Department of Chemistry at the University of Scranton in Pennsylvania, who led the research that was presented at the 242nd National Meeting & Exposition of the American Chemical Society (ACS).

But before you go out and order French fries, the preferred way of eating this most consumed of all vegetables in the US, consider this: the research was done with purple potatoes cooked in the microwave oven, with no oil or fat whatsoever.

"The secret of the Great Stories is that they have no secrets.

The Great Stories are the ones you have heard and want to hear again. The ones you can enter anywhere and inhabit comfortably. They don't deceive you with thrills and trick endings.

They don't surprise you with the unforeseen. They are as familiar as the house you live in. Or the smell of your lover's skin. You know how they end, yet you listen as though you don't. In the way that although you know that one day you will die, you live as though you won't. In the Great Stories you know who lives, who dies, who finds love, who doesn't. And yet you want to know again. THAT is their mystery and magic."

Gaddafi vows: 'we won't surrender again; we are not women'

A defiant Muammar Gaddafi vowed to fight to the end against Libya's new government and its Nato backers, warning that his forces would turn the country "into a hell" rather than surrender like "women".

"We will fight in every valley, in every street, in every oasis, and every town," he said. "We won't surrender again; we are not women; we will keep fighting," he said, referring to loyal tribes in the towns of Sirte and Bani Walid.
